Far away, yet connected every day

For parents sending a child abroad for the first time, the biggest worries are safety and communication. MEC answers both with daily contact.

HOW WE STAY IN TOUCH

ClassDojo arrival alerts

Every parent receives real-time arrival and departure notifications through ClassDojo — you know the moment your child checks in and out.

A direct line to the teacher

Homeroom teachers and parents are directly connected, exchanging lesson feedback, wellbeing notes and anything unusual as it happens.

Parents stay alongside

Children live with their parents and commute to class — family time after school, in an emotionally secure setting.

HEALTH & SAFETY PRINCIPLES

Careful health responses

We never medicate a child on our own judgement. Parents are informed immediately, with hospital hand-over, interpreting and emergency support when needed.

Health check on day one

Health and allergy information is collected at enrolment to set individual response plans.

A safe environment

24-hour security and CCTV inside a planned education city and resort complex, with resident local managers.

Regular reports — progress and daily-life updates arrive as regular reports, so you can watch your child grow from afar.

Daily arrival alerts, a direct line to the teacher, careful health responses — we never replace parents; we stay in step with them.

Parents learn too

While your child learns, so can you

At the same academy

It isn't only for the children — parents can take English classes at the very same academy.

Every level open

Both campuses offer General English from Basic to Intensive 2 for parents.

In step with the family

Choose morning, midday or afternoon slots, scheduled within your child's study hours so the family's daily rhythm stays intact.

> One holiday month where your child's English and your own grow on the same timetable.

Parents' English alongside the children's timetable — immersion for the whole family.

Real academic English, the international-school way

Not conversation textbooks — the coursebooks international schools actually use

We do not teach from generic conversation textbooks. Lessons use the official English coursebooks of the Cambridge curriculum(Primary and Lower Secondary), adopted by international schools worldwide.

Rather than simply practising speaking, students learn exactly as international-school students do — reading texts, grasping concepts and writing logically — truly academic English.

This is what decisively sets MEC apart from conversation-focused academies. Students aiming for international school and beyond are exposed from the start to English as an academic discipline.

- Small groups of 3–10
- Native speakers teach half of group lessons
- Active, student-centred classes

Read

Reading coursebook texts builds academic vocabulary and sentence patterns.

Understand

Discussing concepts turns understanding into their own words.

Write logically

Learned concepts are shaped into logically structured paragraphs.

> It's a curriculum, not conversation — the very English of international-school classrooms.

But a curriculum alone cannot close every individual gap →

Designed for balance — filling in what's missing

What group lessons can't reach, 1:1 targets precisely

Group lessons alone cannot pinpoint each student's weaknesses — especially Speaking and Writing .

So MEC uses 1:1 lessons to diagnose each student's gaps and close them precisely, balancing all four skills — reading, listening, speaking and writing.

Academic input built in group class is digested in 1:1 and converted into spoken and written output.

Higher types add more 1:1 periods, raising the intensity of personalisation.

MORE 1:1 AS THE TYPE STEPS UP

GENERAL	PLUS	INTENSIVE
1 periods / day	2 periods / day	3 periods / day

Group fills, 1:1 balances — connecting input to output.

Once they can speak and write, the next step is the power to read and understand →

Read, understand, express — the skill this era demands

This is the age of reading, understanding and expressing

Speaking and listening alone are no longer enough. What matters now is the ability to read vast information, understand it, and express it in your own words .

The root of that ability is a reading habit — yet building one while also studying English is far from easy.

MEC turns this hard task into a daily routine: every day, read one book → understand it → summarise it, again and again.

Twenty books in a month. The goal is not the count itself, but making the process a habit — so your child keeps reading independently long after camp ends.

MYON & AR — EVERY STEP IS MEASURED

① ATOS diagnosis
Starting level set by grade-equivalent score

② ZPD-matched books
Books assigned to each child's level

③ 90% comprehension quizzes
Comprehension checked after every book

④ Growth report
GE-gain report after 4 weeks

GROWTH REPORT — 4-week growth report (sample)

Before	After	4 weeks	avg. comprehension
GE 3.2	GE 3.8	20 books finished	92%

A book a day, twenty a month — they leave with a reading habit.

And so all this study never exhausts them, English becomes a tool →

Not playtime — a design that turns English into a tool

Robotics coding and chess are not breaks — they are learning by design

Studying English all day actually lowers a child's efficiency. That is why activities like robotics coding and chess are scheduled daily.

But this is no mere playtime. Its purpose is for children to see English not as a subject to study but as a means of communication.

Building a robot or playing chess, the child is no longer learning English — they are learning something else in English. This is where English decisively shifts from goal to tool.

Learning other subjects — coding, strategy games — through English, children internalise how language works in the real world: language is a means of getting things done.

Robot Coding

Building and programming robots from English instructions — creativity and problem-solving.

Chess Class

A strategy game learned in English — calculation and strategic thinking.

Sports Stacking

Speed stacking for reflexes and focus — joyful immersion.

Not time spent learning English — time spent learning in English.

Input → balance → understanding & expression → English as a tool: four elements, one design

EduCity — how the four elements fill a day

45-minute lessons with 5-minute breaks. Each campus runs differently: EduCity splits arrival times into Batch A / Batch B, and every type (BASIC · PLUS · INTENSIVE) is offered on this campus.

EDUCITY CAMPUS TIMETABLE — BATCH A/B SYSTEM · ALL TYPES (INTENSIVE I ONLY)

Batch A / Batch B — different arrival times

Arrival is split into two batches to manage class sizes and rooms. Batch A starts at 08:10, Batch B at 09:50, with different lunch times. Assignment follows the placement test and class grouping.

PLUS · INTENSIVE I — built by adding 1:1

PLUSadds one 1:1 period to the Batch A timetable; INTENSIVE Itakes two 1:1 periods first at 08:10 and 09:00 within Batch B. Group, reading and activity sessions stay the same. INTENSIVE II runs only at the Forest City campus.

FOREST CITY · PLUS & INTENSIVE

A day built around 1:1

The Forest City campus offers the PLUS and INTENSIVE types. BASIC does not run here, so that column is greyed out below.

Three 1:1 periods, four group lessons, then reading and the daily activity. Three 1:1 periodsare a fixed part of the day.

INTENSIVE II — starts 08:10

Writing × Oratory Skill — logical writing meets public speaking.

Stage experience — presenting in public unlocks explosive growth in confidence.

Growing alongside peers — the contest gives an objective measure of their ability.
